The Essentials of Managing Aggressive Behavior

for Campus Security Officers

This day long program is a "must-have" training session for professional campus security officers. As incidents of aggressive behavior in schools continues to increase, campus security officers face more and more challenges in de-escalation situations.

Taught by experienced school security consultants and police self defense instructors, part one of the program prepares the campus security officer to recognize and defuse aggressive behavior before it becomes violent.

In part two, the campus security officer will be trained in basic hand-to hand techniques that can be used to protect himself and without injuring a student, and without violating the rights of the aggressor.
